Hey Mike,

Generally speaking, I believe in regular pulses of information sent out to stakeholders for updates. Overall, these CFAC brochures have done a good job with that. However, they are not always 100 percent information and fact. There is a tone that reflects CFAC's do-not-list position. For example, in this current version, under the NPL status column, the language, "Listing the site does nothing for progress at this time," is clearly a position, not fact. I know people who share the opposing viewpoint that proposing CFAC to be listed is the only thing that seems to have started any kind of progress.

That's my 2 cents. Your thoughts?

Mike and Robert,

I hope your day is going great.

Please find attached to this email the community update we plan to mail. It promotes the site tour and will be printed and mailed by a vendor we use for that service. To meet the printer's deadline, we will be sending it to them Thursday, March 28, at noon. Should you have any feedback, please let me know before that time.

In addition to this mailing, the panel was sent a postcard with the tour date and were encouraged to invite others. We also will post it on our website, as well as issue a press release and place information in the activities section of the newspaper.

Much thanks,
Mary
